

incredible calming influence on both myself and the children. It looks at its most beautiful this morning due to the rays of sunlight penetrating the glass dome.

As I pass the Foundation/Year 1 home base, I can see that they are already busy setting up for the exciting day ahead. Some TA's are moving the walls to accommodate the different groups that will be working there this morning. I can't keep up with them, the space seems to transform every day! It looks like they are doing some work on mini-beasts this morning. I can't wait to see what they produce.

I walk along the out door corridor towards the year 2/3 home base. The trees and shrubs shelter me from the drizzle. I can hear birds singing and the faint squawk of the chickens in the distance. Gosh they're loud! It is an exciting day today, we are working on the Great Fire of London. I change my classroom into the bakery in Pudding Lane. It is really easy to hang drapes onto the walls and before long the classroom is transformed. I hear the sound of birds twittering...must be time for briefing! I buzz Miss Holliday over the intercom to remind her to bring her diary.

The staffroom is already full so I find a comfy chair upstairs in the working area. People are helping themselves to fresh fruit and water. It is really spacious in the staffroom yet still feels cosy. The